How did a cop killer cheat death in Philly?

Death row limbo. Philadelphia Police Officer Charles "Chuck" Cassidy's killer, Lewis Jordan, was slated for lethal injection today, but it was delayed after a May appeal. Why sign? Gov. Tom Corbett had signed the death warrant just a week before. Long process. A spokesman for Corbett says there's nothing he can do. PAGE 02

Killer's execution might never come

Delay. Gov. Tom Corbett has signed 31 death warrants since taking office, and all of them remain tangled in appeals.

Today was to be the execution of Philadelphia police officer Charles "Chuck" Cassidy's killer.

But working within the appeal process in the state of Pennsylvania, Lewis M. Jordan may not step into the lethal injection chair for a while, if ever.

Even though Gov. Tom Corbett signed Jordan's death warrant on April 28, his execution was delayed by Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas Judge Jeffrey Minehart on May 2.

Joshua Maus, a governor's office spokesman, said, "An inmate sentenced to the death penalty has the right to exhaust all claims and all appeals.

"An appeal can take five to 10 years and sometimes longer," Maus added. "And there's nothing the governor can do to expedite the legal process."

The last three executions in Pennsylvania were all volunteers who forfeited their rights to continue their appeal process.

Serial murderer Gary Heidnik, who was put to death in 1999, was the last person executed in the state.

Jordan shot and killed Cassidy in a Dunkin' Donuts on Halloween 2007. He was convicted in 2009.

Philadelphia Police Lt. John Stanford, in a statement, said: "I don't know all of the circumstances surrounding the decision, but we expect the criminal justice system to do its part and hold this male accountable for his cowardice actions."

Lewis M. Jordan

The law

Once a death penalty is rendered, or an appeal has been taken and then denied, Corbett is forced to issue a warrant within three months, and then that warrant has to have a date within 60 days.

Response

FOP head calls it 'expected'

Fraternal Order of Police Lodge No. 5 President John McNesby said: "Unfortunately, that was expected."

"It's gonna be delay after delay," he said. "When was the last time you saw anyone executed in the state? We're there to support Judy (Cassidy) and the family, and hopefully one day this will come to fruition. But they expect long appeals and years of waiting, so they're up for this fight and they have 7,000 family members standing with them."

Funds. Schools make plea for more cash

Superintendent William Hite and School Reform Commission Chair Bill Green on Tuesday demanded more funds from elected officials.

Hite has said Philly public schools need $320 million to meet its budget deficit, and a minimum of $216 million just to keep schools open.

Hite and Green previously refused to pass a budget that contained further cutbacks to the already crippled Philadelphia public school system at a May SRC meeting.

But City Council President Darrell Clarke responded that the city cannot authorize a larger loan, and said the school should have accepted a previous $50 million offer in exchange for vacant school buildings.

"City Council this week will authorize borrowing to fill the District's self-made gap," Clarke said. "With $90 million in debt service on its headquarters alone, council continues to call on the district to off-load its debt and vacant properties … " SAM NEWHOUSE

Trial continues for man who ran over cop on bike

Trial is scheduled to continue today for Kareem Alleyne, 36, charged with homicide by vehicle for running over off-duty police officer Marc Brady as Brady biked in Germantown.

Officer Marc Brady / PROVIDED

Brady was biking toward the home of his ex-girlfriend, which her then-boyfriend Alleyne was just leaving, when Alleyne hit Brady around 11:40 p.m. on July 15, 2012.

Officer Kevin Ghee testified Tuesday that while being transported to the Homicide Unit, Alleyne repeatedly said, "The victim was always around with that girl and he was sick of it," in Ghee's words.

Ghee also responded to an October 2011 call of "person with a gun" at Alleyne's home and found Brady, who Ghee said was unarmed, outside.

Brady's ex-girlfriend was in the house and filed a domestic violence report against Brady for pounding on the door of the house that night, for which he was under investigation at the time of his death.

Trial will continue today. SAM NEWHOUSE

Nerds ready to rejoice at Comic Con in Philly

It's back. This year, the locally based Awesome Fest plays a very special role.

Pop culture buffs will once again reunite this weekend with Wizard World's 14th annual Philadelphia Comic Con at the Convention Center.

This year's event will feature several first-time guests, including David Boreanaz, Whoopi Goldberg, Anthony Mackie, Sebastian Stan and more.

Jerry Milani, Wizard World spokesman, notes the diversity of the programs offered at Comic Con. "It's more than just comics and sci-fi. Our show is everything [from] movies and television [to] art and popular fiction and all that encompasses the world of pop culture."

Visit Metro.us for more info on who will be appearing.

Quoted

"You've got just about every nerd topic covered."
Goldbloom

This year's Comic Con also marks several innovations with the expansion to nine different showrooms and the inclusion of Awesome Fest, a film festival programming board based in Philadelphia.

"The one element we saw that was missing [from Comic Con] was an actual film festival," said Josh Goldbloom, founder of Awesome Fest. "It just seemed like it would be a great fit for us."

Awesome Fest will showcase films like "The Karate Kid," celebrating 30 years since its release, and "To Be Takei," a documentary following "Star Trek" star George Takei.

They will also feature Q&A sessions with people like Ralph Macchio, Christopher Lloyd and John Carpenter.

"We're going to give it our best in Philadelphia," Goldbloom said. "We're going to take it to Chicago and hopefully, the sky's the limit for what we can do."

'Something for everyone'

Milani compares a typical Comic Con visit to a potential Lou Ferrigno fan experience.

- "They are coming to the show because they want to meet Lou Ferrigno, and on their way walking in to get to Lou, they see an artist who draws 'Hulk' things," Milani said. "And then they'll turn to the other side and see an exhibitor who has some merchandise that's 'Hulk' that they've never seen before."

Bad doggy. 'Always Sunny' stars' dog bit baby, says lawsuit

A lawsuit filed this week in Los Angeles demands damages from "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia" stars Rob McElhenney (Mac) and Kaitlin Olson (Dee), who are married to each other, for allegedly allowing their dog to bite a baby girl's cheek off.

Professional acupuncturist and health blogger Julie Festa De LaGarde's lawsuit says her 19-month-old daughter's cheek was left hanging off after the couple's German shepherd bit the girl during a 2012 Father's Day party they were hosting, reports say.

The lawsuit reportedly claims that the incident occurred "without provocation" and that De LaGarde had asked Olson and McElhenney to leash their dog, but they did not.

De LaGarde has blogged about the incident online and posted pictures of her daughter, who still has visible scarring.

Quoted

"Z was petting the dog when out of nowhere the dog snapped and attacked her viciously. ... The dog's owners were clearly horrified and shocked that their dog had done this."

De LaGarde,
in a blog post about the incident

The lawsuit reportedly seeks damages for pain and suffering, psychological suffering and to cover the costs of future plastic surgeries to remove the scars from De LaGarde's daughter's face.

Representatives for McElhenney and Olson did not respond to requests for comment. SAM NEWHOUSE

US military nabs suspected leader in Libya attack

Terrorist attack. Obama announced that military special forces captured the ringleader.

The United States said on Tuesday it had captured a suspected ringleader of the 2012 attack on the U.S. diplomatic compound in Benghazi, Libya, a raid that killed four Americans including the U.S. ambassador and ignited a political firestorm in Washington.

President Barack Obama said in a statement that he had authorized the operation in Libya on Sunday in which U.S. military troops, working with law enforcement personnel, captured Ahmed Abu Khatallah.

"Since the deadly attacks on our facilities in Benghazi, I have made it a priority to find and bring to justice those responsible for the deaths of four brave Americans," Obama said, adding that Khatallah would "face the full weight of the American justice system."

A U.S. official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Khatallah was being held aboard an American ship after he was grabbed on the outskirts of Benghazi in an operation carried out by U.S. special operations forces. REUTERS

Iraqi leader accuses Saudis of 'genocide'

Iraq's Shi'ite rulers defied Western calls on Tuesday to reach out to Sunnis to defuse the uprising in the north of the country, declaring a boycott of Iraq's main Sunni political bloc and accusing Sunni power Saudi Arabia of promoting "genocide."

Washington has made clear it wants Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki to embrace Sunni politicians as a condition of U.S. support to fight an advance by forces.

Maliki has blamed Saudi Arabia for supporting militants in the past, but the severe language was unprecedented. REUTERS

After deadly tornado, 'Pilger is gone'

Residents were forced to leave a Nebraska village that was leveled by a tornado that killed a child and injured more than two dozen people. But they began returning on Tuesday to salvage belongings from their battered homes and businesses, including a church and school. The town of Pilger, just several blocks wide and home to about 350 people, took a direct hit Monday afternoon as tornadoes swept across a farming area in northeast Nebraska, devastating up to 75 percent of its buildings, officials said. "Pilger is gone," said Sanford Goshorn, director of emergency management for Stanton County. REUTERS / JAKE WRAGGE/NORFOLK DAILY NEWS

Climate change threatens tourism

Water world. Ski slopes will thaw and seas will rise.

Climate change is a growing threat to tourism, from thawing slopes at ski resorts to coral reefs hit by warmer seas, and the industry itself should do more to curb its soaring greenhouse gas emissions, a study showed on Tuesday.

Tourism's greenhouse gas emissions, on current rising trends buoyed by ever more travel, are set to reach about 10 percent of the world total by 2025 from between 3.9 and 6 percent now, it said.

"The tourism industry will be severely impacted by climate change," according to the study by Cambridge University's Institute for Sustainability Leadership (CISL) and its Judge Business School and the European Climate Foundation.

Coral reefs, for instance, contributed $11.5 billion a year to tourism earnings and are under threat from warmer sea temperatures, rising sea levels and an acidification caused by a build-up of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, it said.

And warmer winters are shortening winter sports seasons and threatening the viability of some ski resorts, according to the report, which distils findings about tourism from studies this year by the U.N. panel of scientists. REUTERS

By the numbers

Travel accounts for about 75 percent of tourism's greenhouse gas emissions. More efficient planes, vehicles and greener fuels could help curb emissions, according to the report.

Quoted

"Every part of the industry needs to ... think about what more can be done to adapt to climate change, as well as how to continue the process of reducing the impact of their operations on the environment."

Stephen Farrant, director of the International Tourism Partnership, said in a statement attached to the report.

The Missionary Sisters of St. Charles Borromeo said Illinois mandates a 1,000-foot buffer zone between adult entertainment venues and places of worship or schools. The suit, filed on Friday in Cook County, also names the village of Stone Park, where the strip club is located.

The $3 million Club Allure opened last September across the back fence of the convent, which has three chapels, a home for retired sisters and a house for young women thinking about becoming nuns, the nuns' lawyers said.

"The Sisters have every right to pray and work peacefully without disruption from a strip club in their backyard," Peter Breen, the lawyer for the nuns, said in a statement. REUTERS

Gosling hoax hits Facebook

Nearly 1 million readers were taken in recently by a bogus story about Ryan Gosling trying to adopt a baby. An unverified account posted a photo of Gosling laughing with a baby along with a lengthy explanation purportedly written by the "Drive" star. The supposed Gosling post described how he'd tried to get custody of an infant because the mother had wanted him to after she died of cancer. "One year later after the adoption, his biological father wanted him. Of course, I put up a fight, but he won," the post stated. "We have to stop and be thankful for our children and children should stop and be thankful for their parents. What I truly learned most of all is, every child needs love. Save thousands of children and meet me while doing it." The post included a link to buy limited-edition T-shirts and a chance to win a date with Gosling, all in exchange for donations to the Orphanage Home Foundation, which doesn't actually exist. The post earned 936,000 likes and was shared more than 51,000 times before it was deleted.

Joey "Eye" Intrieri, it's time for your close-up. The colorful local boxing promoter, renowned "cut man" and actor is the subject of a bidding war between rival networks. After seeing his sizzle reel, Discovery Channel and A&E are looking at Eye's mannerisms and ba-da-bing lexicology for a reality show following him through his exploits in the boxing world and beyond.

John Wayne and Montgomery Clift get dirty in "Red River." / CRITERION COLLECTION

Screen play. Three reasons to buy the Western 'Red River'

'Red River'

The Criterion Collection
$49.95

1 Director Howard Hawks had quit two Westerns before he finally finished one. And it was a doozy: "Red River," released in 1948, is a cattle drive movie in which John Wayne's stubborn, Ahab-esque rancher clashes with his adopted son, played by a rarely more relaxed Montgomery Clift. It's a boy's adventure and a dark psychological exploration at once, as well as a Howard Hawks hang-out picture, with an ensemble cast that struggles to keep cool as an increasingly psychotic Wayne keeps picking them off.

2 Wayne's chilling performance in "The Searchers" tends to dominate serious consideration of him as an actor and not just a movie star. But "Red River" was the first time he'd gone dark. The Duke very slightly modulates his usual screen presence so that his line-delivery sounds both badass and menacing. As an oft-told story goes, his frequent director John Ford after seeing the film joked, "I didn't know the big sonofabitch could act."

3 Even for the Criterion Collection, this is one comprehensive set. The package is a brick, thanks to the inclusion of Borden Chase's "Blazing Guns on the Chisholm Trail," the serialized novel that served as inspiration. You can also compare two different versions: the 133-minute cut that's long been in circulation and the shorter pre-release version that Hawks always said he preferred.

Vincent Piazza

Interview. The "Boardwalk Empire" star talks about playing the scariest of the "Jersey Boys."

Vincent Piazza is best known for playing Lucky Luciano, one of the leads on "Boardwalk Empire." He might seem an odd fit for Clint Eastwood's film of "Jersey Boys," especially since he's the only one of the main four actors who hasn't come from some production of the longtime musical favorite. Then again, he's playing Tommy DeVito, the toughest and scariest of the Four Seasons, whose history is a lot sketchier than their clean-cut sound might suggest.

Did you talk to Tommy DeVito as research?
Never met the man. I only got to know him through the screenplay — that and anecdotes. The rest of the cast did the musical for years, and they would hear these stories from meeting the real guys. And then Mr. [Frank] Valli would be on the set. There was a treasure chest of great stories.

Some of which probably couldn't be in the film.
But you could give shades and colors of them. For instance, Michael Lomenda [who plays Nick Massi] and talks tough

A good fella

The Joe Pesci Show

One of the crazier parts of "Jersey Boys" is that Joe Pesci knew them when he was younger and is a character in the show and film. And then in "Goodfellas" he played a character named Tommy DeVito.
I actually explored that

PESCI

with the character. I'm playing the older guy with a younger Joe Pesci, so I'm wondering how much of [DeVito's] personality informed him. I would actually act like him every now and then. Any chance I had to throw in a "prick" or something like that. I felt comfortable doing that because I was trying to establish that kind of relationship with Joseph Russo, who plays Joe Pesci.

I watched this raw footage of Massi and Tommy DeVito doing a sound-check. They were such great friends that they had nicknames: "Tamooch" and "Machoach." So when [in the film] I was leaving prison and he was going in, he said, "Tamooch!" and I said, "Machoach!"

The Four Seasons were certainly tougher than one might imagine.
I think that's a surprise for the audience. There's such a glamour associated with the '50s and '60s, because it was pre-TMZ and pre-Twitter and [pre-]Facebook. [The Four Seasons] may not have gotten off the ground if those kinds of media channels existed.

Of the group, you're playing the rough one.
I think Tommy's strength in the beginning was his personality. When they got out of the neighborhood, that strong personality became one of his weaknesses. He felt he had to keep a foot in the neighborhood. That's something I can identify with. Maybe those people, when they get scared, they want to go home. The world outside of New Jersey can be a little intimidating.

You have to do a few scenes where you talk directly into the camera.
We were going to do these transitional shots of me going into jail and out of jail. I thought the narration would be done in the studio. And Mr. Eastwood comes up to me and says, "Vince, I think you should talk to the camera and do your narration." And I'm thinking, do I even know these words? Funny enough, it turns out I did, and I did it. It was strangely freeing because normally you have to hit marks. But when you're looking into the camera you don't have to look for those. You just form a relationship with the camera.

Could you sing?
I was kind of thrust into the music. The "Jersey Boys" community was so helpful. They gave me a crack team for the choreography and the singing. And Mr. Eastwood put a live band behind us. What that did for me was give this surge of energy. It was humbling, though, because I wouldn't say, "In 30 days I could sing four-part harmony with guys who've done it hundreds of times."

AMAZING DIABETES STUDY
Encouraging Study on TYPE II DIABETES Shows the disease CAN BE REVERSED in as little as 1 WEEK!
A free guide has just been made available to Type II Diabetics detailing an approach that appears to be more powerful than any drug know to modern science. The free diabetic guide explains in plain English how many diabetics have been able to reduce and eliminate their drugs and insulin injections, lose weight without exercise, reduce and eliminate the risk for diabetic complications, restore pancreatic function, and even become non-diabetic. The free guide also reveals rarely used diagnostic testing that is helping doctors understand potential causes of diabetes beyond weight gain, genetics and lack of exercise.

Vacation home sales on the rise

Looks like quite a few of you owe us a beach party invitation. According to a survey from the National Association of Realtors, vacation home sales in the U.S. rose 29.7 percent last year to an estimated 717,000 properties, up from 553,000 in 2012. These sales accounted for 13 percent of all transactions last year.

Put your cat on your shirt

App-arel. SeeMe turns your filtered photos into cool, wearable art.

App art just reached a new level. SeeMe is similar to Instagram, in that it's a feed of photos, but what makes it different is that, with a few clicks, you can turn any image in your feed into a T-shirt.

"There are some amazing photos on SeeMe that you're not going to find anywhere else," says founder William Etundi.

Many artists use SeeMe to post their unique illustrations, but there are still the beloved Internet trends, like cats. "Cat images are very popular as T-shirt prints, [and they] look amazing," says Etundi.

SeeMe started back in 2012 as a community for artists and grew rapidly. The people behind the app wanted to find a way their images could be shared as social objects, just like Polaroid photographs were in the '70s and '80s. With SeeMe, they found a way artists could earn money and get their work "out there."

Users can use hashtags to find whatever they're looking for out of the more than 27 million images.

"Sometimes the most random images look the coolest because they're unexpected," says Etundi.

Once you've chosen an image you want on a T-shirt, you can manipulate it by zooming in or out, and also design your own front and back however you want.

"This way each and every T-shirt is unique," says Etundi.

It costs $26 to turn your own photo into a T-shirt and $32 to use someone else's art, with $6 going to the original photographer.

Even though there are other ways you can design your own T-shirt, SeeMe is the only place where you can create an all-over print, Etundi tells us. "The best part is that with our app, unlike others, it takes only seconds to make a stunning shirt or product."

The funniest T-shirt Etundi has done is a picture of one of his co-workers. And now everyone in the SeeMe offices is running around with it. "It's hilarious," says Etundi. "We're wearing our co-worker to work!"

POST A PICTURE OF YOUR CAT AND THEN WEAR IT.

STAY SAFE (OR JUST WORRY LOVED ONES)

We're actually cheating this week, as the service we'd like to write about — Kitestring — is technically not an app, even though it probably should be. It's SMS-based, which is to say it functions through text messaging. And it can be a very useful program — or a very bothersome one.

Not to be confused with Kite String, an app that involves actual kites, it's a service that allows you to let an emergency contact know when you're making potentially unsafe trips. This could be useful at night or if you simply live in a dangerous neighborhood. Via text — or using your phone browser by going to the site — you let Kitestring know how long you estimate your journey to take. If you fail to check-in at that time, your emergency contact is alerted.

This can be hugely helpful, but there are many ways this could go… well, not wrong, but not so swimmingly. What if your phone dies en route? What if you get stranded on the subway thanks to a "signal failure"? Kitestring goes into effect whether your phone's active or not. One has to use Kitestring with a degree of caution, otherwise you may freak out your friend (or your mom, who will summon all the forces of government to find you). Then again, you don't want to take too much caution, especially for those times Kitestring may, in fact, prove useful.

Don't fall for 'Diet Cults'

See more at www.metro.us

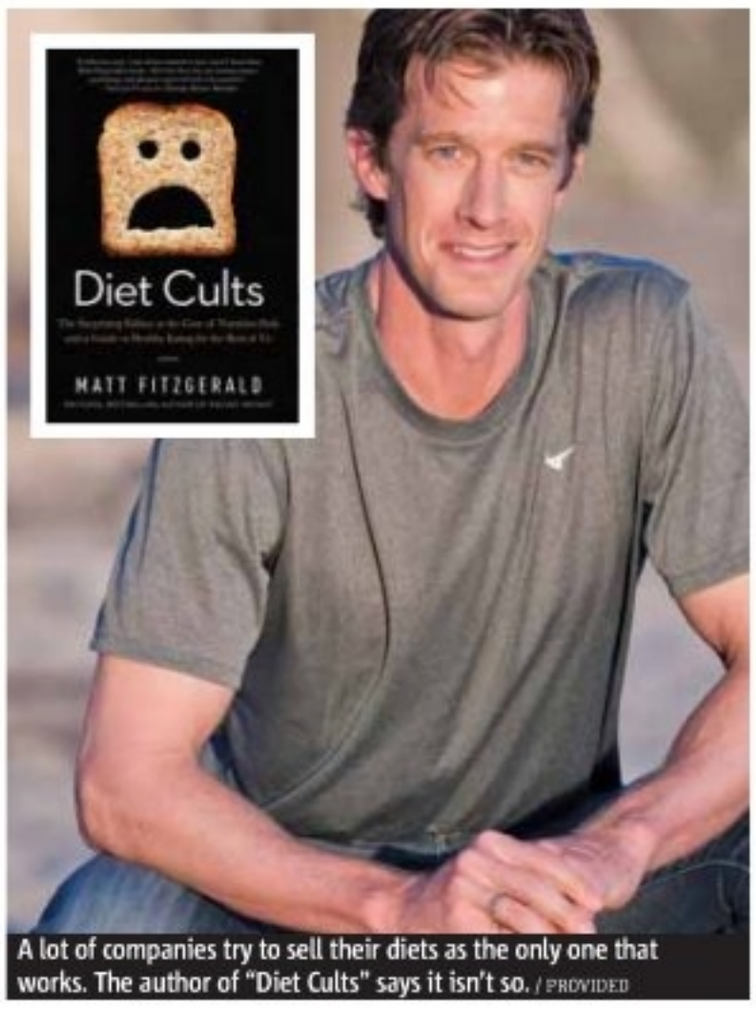
Fad or food?

There's no one way to get healthy, says Matt Fitzgerald.

If you've ever rolled your eyes at a fad diet, you'll like what Matt Fitzgerald has to say.

A certified sports nutritionist and author of the best-selling "Racing Weight," Fitzgerald's new book is called "Diet Cults." Turns out there's no one right way of dieting, but rather sensible ways of being healthy that don't require a high tolerance for one kind of food (or total avoidance of another).

We talk to the nutritionist who finds diet books insufferable.



A lot of companies try to sell their diets as the only one that works. The author of "Diet Cults" says it isn't so. / PROVIDED

What makes your book different from other diet books?

Most diet books present a particular diet as better than any other diet, but I'm not doing that. I'm first of all exposing the idea that there is a single best diet as false. Secondly, I'm making the argument that you can't just eat anything you want and expect to be healthy. Human beings are very adaptable dietetically, however, so you can eat in a way that conforms to your culture and personal preferences and still be very healthy.

Why are there so many only-one-way diets?

I think the conventional answer to that question is money. Diets are a competitive marketplace.

But I also think there's an ancient tradition of judging other people on how they eat that has nothing to do with capitalism. If you go back to ancient cultures, they tended to distinguish themselves from other cultures through their diets. We eat this way, those guys eat that way and our way is better. That motivates us to evangelize on behalf of whatever diet we decided is the best.

What is the best advice for people who want to live a healthy lifestyle?

Keep it simple. The average fifth-grader knows that you should eat lots of fruit and vegetables and not a lot of soft drinks. You don't really need to go too far beyond that.

What are the common mistakes people make with their diet choices?

[It] can complicate your life if suddenly there are things you grew up eating and enjoying, but you don't allow yourself to eat them anymore. By focusing on a nutrient instead of the food, you can make things more difficult for yourself than they really need to be.

Camelot now ruled by robber barons

As a young child in a Republican family, I had no love for President Kennedy. Yet as an adult, I have gained tremendous respect for Kennedy's performance and his appreciation of our liberties. Today, the press is just a puppet for the White House and all info is censured under the guise of "national security." Sadly, the more money the military industrial complex spends and the more social programs are rammed down our throats, the more money Goldman Sachs and the Federal Reserve and their cohorts make on that debt!

Gay should be normal

Re: 'Orientation is serious,' 'Everyone should get their say' (Metro, June 17) Gay and transgender people aren't rubbing any movement in anyone's faces. They don't want to feel like they're special or different. They simply want to be treated as equal human beings (rather than something like subterranean mole people), but society is far too bigoted. It's important for these people to announce who they are so others are inspired to do the same.

Scoreless wonder

Hamels continues dominant play

Cole Hamels once again was brilliant Monday night, throwing seven scoreless innings against the Braves. And once again, he was not rewarded with a victory. The lefty has gone 23 2/3 innings without allowing a run and has lowered his ERA to 2.78, good for 10th best in the NL. He is also striking out 9.2 batters per nine, the best mark he's posted since his rookie year.

ROLLINS HAS EVERYTHING EXCEPT LOVE OF THE FANS

The voice of Philly sports

ANGELO CATALDI

SPORTS@METRO.US

Rollins is the longest-tenured Phillie, as well as the longest tenured player in the entire National League. / GETTY IMAGES

Jimmy Rollins is the best shortstop in Phillies history. He has won a World Series, an MVP award, four Gold Gloves and now leads the franchise in hits. He is also resilient, honest and charming. There's really only one thing he lacks after 14 seasons here — the love of the fans.

Oh, he absorbed an outpouring of affection over the weekend when he surpassed Mike Schmidt's record of 2,234 hits, and the man known as J-Roll deserved every cheer, every accolade. No one is more responsible for the most successful era in Phillies baseball than Rollins.

But the majority of Phillies fans don't love the guy, not in the head-over-heels way they love Chase Utley or Harry Kalas. Since 2000, I have taken thousands of calls on my WIP radio show about Rollins, and there is no question he has polarized our city more in that period than any other star player, including Donovan McNabb and Allen Iverson.

Quoted

"An Internet poll I conducted last week at WIP showed that 70 percent of Phillies fans were not excited about the new record."

Cataldi

Basically, Rollins tainted his legacy with two serious blunders. The first, of course, is his infamous lack of hustle. Former manager Charlie Manuel benched him a couple of times for not running hard, but only when the laziness cost the team a base runner. To fans, the countless times that Rollins cheated himself and his team without punishment were equally damaging.

There are many crimes in sports for which star players are forgiven here, but not playing hard is unpardonable in a blue-collar place like Philadelphia. That's why Utley will always be more beloved than Rollins, and why Pete Rose remains a hero here, but a pariah to the rest of baseball.

The second mistake is a subtler one. Rollins has admitted over the past two seasons that he would never consider leaving the Phillies — he has a no-trade clause — before he set the record for hits. Fans have no problem with a player aiming for team goals, but they cringe at those who openly seek individual milestones.

Philadelphia sports fans are really not complicated at all. They want to win — which Rollins has done — and they want the players to care as much as they do. When J-Roll didn't run hard and when he worried about his own stats, they sensed less than a full commitment to team success. An Internet poll I conducted last week at WIP showed that 70 percent of Phillies fans were not excited about the new record.

Jimmy Rollins will be the best Phillies shortstop for a long, long time, and he will probably hold the hits record for generations, too. The one thing he will not have is the one thing he didn't earn here in Philadelphia — the love of the fans. For that, he has only himself to blame.

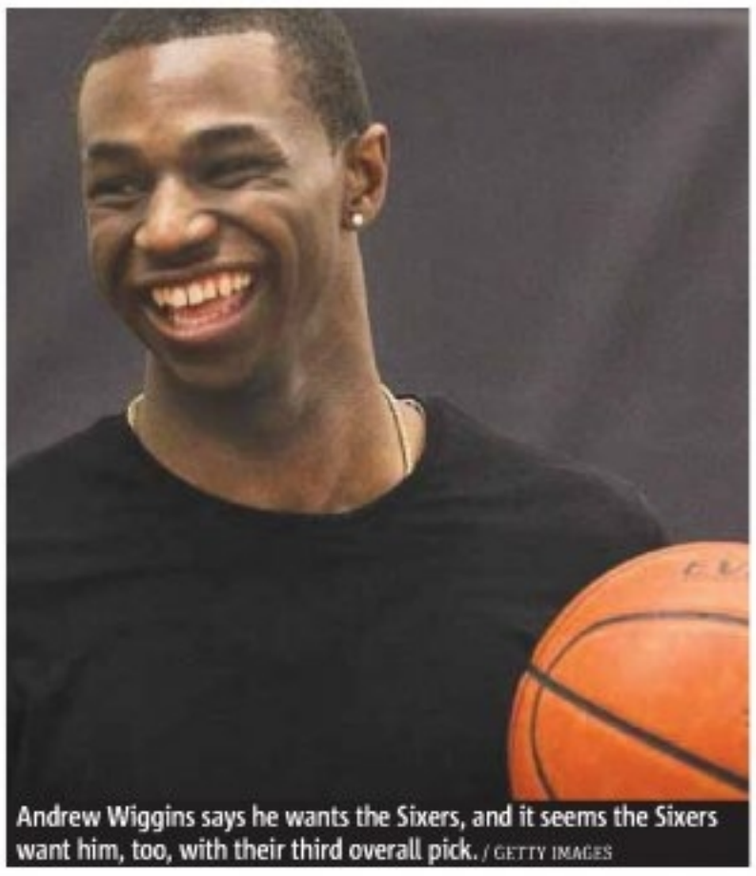
Cataldi. Sixers must avoid Wiggins in NBA draft, he's a sure bust



Andrew Wiggins says he wants the Sixers, and it seems the Sixers want him, too, with their third overall pick. / GETTY IMAGES

When Andrew Wiggins arrived at the Sixers' offices yesterday, he should have been wearing a sign on his back: Disaster Ahead! Because that is exactly what he represents in the NBA draft nine days from now. He will break the heart of whichever team picks him. He will be a bust. Bet on it.

At the risk of redundancy, I offer my second consecutive week of dire warnings about Wiggins, the forward from Kansas whose extraordinary talents are exceeded only by his soft inner core. (Don't miss part three here next week.) Wiggins is precisely the kind of player designed to slip right past the analytics probing of GM Sam Hinkie because there are no statistical breakdowns on heart.

Last week, ESPN reported that Wiggins prefers to play in Philadelphia, a report that drew acclaim here for obvious reasons. We love to be wanted. The only problem is, any player who prefers the Sixers right now is not the kind of young star they need.

Final thoughts

"So let's review. Wiggins scored four points in the biggest game of his career, Kansas coach Bill Self said the young player lacks the mentality of 'the Alpha dog,' and the kid is looking for a soft place to land in the NBA draft. The bottom line: Andrew Wiggins is an amazing athlete with no backbone."

Wiggins wants to play on a team with one proven player — Michael Carter-Williams — and two other possible contributors, Thaddeus Young and Nerlens Noel? Really?

Now why would that be? It's obvious. Because he wants to be in a place with no early expectations and no pressure. Remember, Sixers CEO Scott O'Neil is already on the record saying he doesn't expect the team to make the playoffs next season — which is precisely what Wiggins wanted to hear.

When he left Philadelphia yesterday after his visit, Sixers fans all need to hope really, really hard that Wiggins was carrying a one-way ticket out of town.

Visit Metro.us to see what Cataldi thinks is wrong with the Flyers.

Idle thoughts

- Ten days after Darin Ruf was told he didn't have a broken wrist, the slugger learned that he actually did have a fracture. OK, how many screw-ups is that now for the team's medical staff? Chase Utley, Ryan Howard, Roy Halladay, Cole Hamels, Cliff Lee and now Ruf. It's time for new doctors and trainers.

- Lane Johnson got into trouble with his teammates last week when the Eagles lineman tweeted the receipt from a $17,000 tab he paid for at a rookie dinner. Johnson's mistake was not his bragging; it was about tweeting, period. How many players have to get burned before they realize this?

LANE JOHNSON IS A KEY MEMBER OF THE EAGLES' OFFENSIVE LINE. GETTY IMAGES

- If you're looking for the biggest goat in the NBA Finals, start with loudmouth Chris Bosh, who guaranteed a win in Game 5 before Miami got demolished by the Spurs. In the 39 minutes Bosh played, the Spurs outscored the Heat by 20 points.

- Bravo to new Philadelphia Union manager Jim Curtin, a huge Philly sports fans who gushed about many of the big recent Eagles and Phillies moments during his introductory news conference last week.

Sixers work out Wiggins, draft plan comes into focus

NBA. The Sixers should end up with a premium player at No. 3, but who will they wind up taking?

With the NBA draft now just a little over a week away, Sixers management has been busy scheduling workouts with some of this year's top prospects.

On Monday and Tuesday, highly touted forward Andrew Wiggins made his way to the PCOM center for a two-day individual workout with the team, which further proved the Sixers' desire of drafting him at all costs next Thursday in New York.

Point guard Dante Exum also held a workout Monday, which was much less publicized. ESPN's Chad Ford believes there's a high possibility the Australia native could be taken with the No. 3 pick if Wiggins isn't available then.

Most experts believe that the Sixers' top pick is a three-headed race. Forwards Wiggins and Jabari Parker are looked at as the picks which would make the most sense, while center Joel Embiid would be too hard for them to pass up if he falls to No. 3.

The No. 10 pick isn't as clear as No. 3 for the Sixers.

All evidence leads Sixers fans to believe they will have either Andrew Wiggins or Jabari Parker to root for in 2014. / GETTY IMAGES

Other targets

Here are a few other names to consider:

- Aaron Gordon, PF, Arizona
- Dario Saric, PF, Croatia
- Nik Stauskas, SG, Michigan
- Gary Harris, SG, Michigan State

Last week the team had Kentucky big man Julius Randle in for a private workout. Randle used to be looked at as a top five selection before questions surrounding a screw in his right foot now have NBA teams shying away from selecting the 6-foot-9, 250-pound power forward.

Many experts now have the Sixers drafting Randle at No. 10, which would be a dream scenario for the team.

Trading up?

76ers could target a late first-rounder

Going by who the team has brought in for workouts this past month, it seems like the team is hoping to use some of their five second-round picks in exchange for a late first-rounder on draft night.

They've worked out a slew of notable players who could drop into the bottom half of the first round such as Gary Harris, Rodney Hood, K.J. McDaniels, T.J. Warren and P.J. Hairston.

The team could be looking at Phoenix as a possible trade destination who has shown interest for Thaddeus Young in the past and which own picks Nos. 14, 18 and 27 in the first round. A combination of Young and a couple of the team's second-rounders might be enough for a deal to get done and net the Sixers a third first-round pick.

Have you been diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD)? Are you still suffering frequent and severe symptoms?

If you or someone you know is currently suffering from PTSD, you/they may be interested in taking part in a clinical research study looking at a potential new treatment (an investigational medication) for adults with PTSD. The study is looking at whether the investigational medication improves the symptoms of PTSD when added to a commercially available, approved medication.

To be able to take part in this study, you must:
- be 18–65 years of age (inclusive)
- have been diagnosed with PTSD and still have frequent and severe symptoms
- have been experiencing PTSD symptoms for at least 3 months.

The event that triggered your symptoms must have occurred within the past 15 years.

All study participants will receive study-related care and will be monitored closely throughout the study. Study-related medication and all study-related assessments will be provided at no cost to you.

If you would like to help us evaluate a potential new treatment for PTSD by taking part in this study, please contact
